Hi John

I recently asked on Facebook, "What's the one thing about your driving that you'd most like to improve?" The response was overwhelming... braking and corner entry speed. Of course, the specific answers varied from "brake release" to "not over-slowng," and "knowing where and how to brake" to "getting the car to turn in with speed." Throw in some comments about trail braking, left-foot braking, downshifting, and rotating the car, and it became obvious to me that many drivers have figured out what I have:

The real key to driving fast is what you do with the brake pedal, approaching and entering corners. What separates the best from the rest is what happens from the moment you begin braking, all the way to the apex.

Sure, the line and your exit speed are important. Even critical. But done right, your braking and corner entry can set you up to get to full throttle earlier.

If there were ever super-trick, advanced stuff that elite drivers do, the Improve Your Braking & Corner Entry webinar will cover them. I've been able to work with some of the very best drivers in the world and now you'll know their "tricks" - I'm going to share what I've learn from them with you.

The webinar goes live on Tuesday, January 15th at 5:30pm Pacific/8:30pm Eastern. If that date and time doesn't work well for you, no worries. If you register, you'll get the full recording of the webinar to play and replay on your own schedule. And as always with my webinars, I'm going to spend as much time as I need to answer your questions on the topic.

When I planned out the webinars I wanted to do for 2019, I knew I had to start with this one, as it may just be the biggest improvement you can make to your driving. And hey, there's always more, right?

If you haven't attended one of my webinars, you won't know that they're as interactive as something online can be. I answer questions and relate to your needs. And it's not just a bunch of information I'm throwing at you; I give you specific, proven practice exercises that will lead to improvement.
